FARM ACCOUNTING

Modern farming is a business and to be successful should be conducted in a business like manner. Farming has developed to the stage where it is a commercial enterprise in which the character of the management largely determines its come and profit. It involves the production and sale of commodities as well as the use of capital and the purchase of supplies and labor the same as most other kinds of business.

Present conditions in farming emphasize the importance to the farmer of having a record of his business transactions as well as a permanent record of other details of his farm enterprise to which he can readily refer. The problem of the farmer is to meet conditions in such a way that his farm will give him the most satisfactory net returns, year in and year out, for the use of his investment, his labor and his managerial ability. Many farmers realize that some change or adjustment in their combination of enterprises or method of management might increase their farm income. They may be unable, however, to determine what changes to make owing to a lack of records on which to base any change in enterprises or methods. A farm account book, properly kept and analyzed, is the fact finder for the farmer. An account book points out the weak spots in the farm business and points out the hole through which the profits have leaked.

A Farm Account Book may be procured from the King's Printer, Ottawa, at a nominal price.

C. S. Noble of Netherford demonstrated his new implement for summerfallowing on the farm of Ed. Carlson on Wednesday.

Mr. Carlson was well pleased with the machine and will purchase one at an early date.

Shark Fishing New West Coast Sport

The spunky trout of the Laurentians and the Canadian Rockies, the scrappy bass of Northern Ontario, the huge muskellunge at French River have all been put on their kettle by a fighting fish new to Canadian sportsmen—the shark, killer of the deep.

Basking sharks have been found in large numbers on the east coast of Vancouver Island while they seem harmless as far as swimmers are concerned, they are a terror on the end of 500 yards of 50-pound test line.

Many fishermen have tried shark fishing with great success.

A Victoria man, McIntyre Matteson, caught the first shark. It weighed 526 pounds. The record so far is a 987-pounder landed by Commander May, of California.

Equipment is simple and not too expensive and the sport is thrilling beyond imagination. When the shark first takes the bait, a salmon from six to eight pounds, the fisherman thinks he has hooked the bottom. Then the fun starts. With mad rushes and plunges he chases the water into foam. He has a nasty habit of turning on the boat and snapping at the line or rolling on it and covering it with his file-like skin.

next. About the time you think your back will break or your arms torn out, you work the fish closer to the boat. It is suicidal to try to land such a large fish and it is customary to give him a coup-de-grace with a 30-35 rifle.

It is a grand sport and a new one for Canadians but interest is so keen, judging by inquiries received by the Canadian Pacific tourist department at Montreal, that many Canadian and American sportsmen are expected to visit forces in a war on sharks from July to September, the time of year they appear in greatest numbers.

Biting The Hand

There will be few Canadians in Eastern Canada as well as in the West, who will quarrel with the suggestion that some means should be found or devised to prevent people who have amassed great wealth in Canada from escaping taxation and succession duties by moving to other countries.

There is no suggestion, of course, that the super wealthy should be prohibited from leaving Canada to reside elsewhere should they choose to do so, but it is proposed that some measures should be enacted to require these people to contribute their just share towards the cost of government of the country which has made their wealth possible.

Evolving Obligations

The discovery that there are people who have made considerable wealth in this country and are seeking to avoid their obligations by retiring elsewhere and taking their wealth with them was revealed during discussions in the House of Commons, during which debate the suggestion was made that something should be done to prevent such evasion.

As the Editor of the Western Retailer, official organ of the Retail Merchants' Association in the prairie provinces said in the March issue: "Taxpayers must have been interested when attention was called in the Federal House to the fact that a number of Canada's super wealthy were leaving Canada to reside in the West Indies to enjoy the climate, the scenery, and quite incidentally, to escape taxation. There was a request for legislation to make it impossible for migrants of this kind to escape taxation. No doubt that phase of the subject will be considered further."

As the same writer appropriately comments: "The question as to who should pay the most taxes arises. Surely the super rich should not be evaders. There are many such in Canada and in the U.S.A. who could pay half their income in taxes and still be unable to spend the other half. Yet recent disclosures have shown that they are the very people who, under skilled and no doubt highly paid advice, do evade taxation, succession duties and so forth."

Hard On Poorer Taxpayers

It is bad enough for the Dominion and the Provinces to have to lose their rightful and legal income from such sources, but what is worse is the fact that the delinquency of the rich, who by such means escape their obligations, entails severe loss upon the remaining and necessarily poorer taxpayers who are obliged to remain in the country and who can ill afford such additional burden.

The principal point is that those who have become wealthy because of the facilities and opportunities afforded them by the country of their nativity or adoption, as the case may be, have a moral obligation to assist in supporting that country and the people—their neighbors—who have assisted them in creating a fortune for themselves and their families. If they choose to elude this obligation it is not going too far to say that they are willing to bite the hand that fed them.

Where Is Patriotism?

As the Western Retailer says: "It is disheartening to the struggling business taxpayer to read of these things, knowing that he must pay for their evasions. The wealthier a man is, the greater his responsibilities are and the fiercer and clearer the example he should set for the rest. Singing 'O Canada' does not necessarily make a man a patriotic citizen or even a good one."

The revelations recently made in the House of Commons do, however, raise in the minds of many, another aspect of the question and that is the burdensome taxation from which all the taxpayers of the country, rich and poor alike are suffering due to over-government which in turn is caused by the existence of too many taxing governmental units for a country of comparatively sparse population and wide extent.

Fact finding bodies and organizations have established without fear of contradiction, that the people of this country are over-governed and it is to be hoped that some of the recommendations which have been made to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-provincial relations in an effort to remedy this condition and relieve the taxpayers of some of the excessive costs of government, will be given very serious consideration.

Worthy Of Consideration

Included in these recommendations are proposals for more centralized government, for the merger of some governmental units as well as for more equitable distribution of taxing rights and elimination of much overlapping which must necessarily result from a multiplicity of tax levying bodies.

All of these proposals, especially those which have not been made direct to the Commission merit pondering and efforts should be made to reduce the tax burden on rich and poor alike if the people of the country are to be given an opportunity of again enjoying a reasonable measure of prosperity.

The fact, however, that the country is over-governed and over-taxed does not relieve those who have become wealthy in this country from their moral, if not legal obligations, to do their part in paying for the cost of government.

FLIN FLON

"The Story of Its Finding and Position Today"

By PRATT KUHIN

"HUNG"—THE FIRE DOG OF FLIN FLON

Just a bouncing Boston Bull, white mouse, cher and paws, is "Bing" of Flin Flon, but a self-taught fireman, believe it or not.

He was born Jan. 1922 and ever since he was a half grown pup has attended every fire drill and every fire, summer or winter.

They use a siren for a fire call in Flin Flon and they also use it to announce blasts in the open pit mine. Bing goes on his hand like a flash from a gun on a fire siren, but disdaining refuse to budge for a blast call. How does he know the difference?

He has established a patrol route of his own which extends a block down the main street, across and up the other side, and this is why he's always on hand before even the firemen when a fire call sounds because the blast is just at the end of the main street. He climbs to the highest spot on the engine and hangs on.

"Bing" knows every driver and policeman. He knows every piece of apparatus on the motorized engine and it's a service to give him help pull the hose off the reels, bounding and barking at the firemen.

Here's something you hardly believe. This dog can catch the fire truck going about 10 miles an hour, spring on the rear step and balance himself with paws around the upright post just like a fireman.

The second show in the local theatre starts at 9 p.m., so after keeping clear till that time, "Bing" calls it a day, goes to the fire hall, and Chief Otto O. Klutz escorts him in the home of his owner, Mr. J. D. McMartin, where "Bing" barks a good night.

But let the siren sound in the night and owner McMartin has got to get out of bed pronto or "Bing" would be through a window to attend the fire.

In some strange fashion he knows Sundays and never appears at the fire hall, but does hunt out a fast driver named "Nick", who once befriended "Bing" by taking him home after a dog fight.

He puts the works on Nick for a dog fight, but the dog is from Flin Flon, where there's a good beach and bathing. Arrived three "Bing" takes his turn diving with the boys and girls off the 10-foot board.

All the 7,000 residents of Flin Flon, a town known "Bing", judging by the question I asked him answered, I, myself, met him at a small fire in the muskog just outside the town within an hour after I'd arrived there.

Following the reels and the crowd, the fire engine of Flin Flon waits for Chief Otto O. Klutz to get aboard. Chief Klutz came from down Kitchener, Ont. way, and this is a striking likeness of him standing in front of the fire truck.

King George Delighted Members By Attending Boxing Finals

The arrival of the King at the Albert Hall recently to see the Boxing Finals of the Federation of Boys' Clubs was thrilling. It was the first time that a King of England has attended an amateur boxing championship.

He arrived just as the third and last round of a contest was beginning and stood in the doorway so as not to disturb the boxers. Then came a tremendous roar of welcome as, accompanied by the Duke of Gloucester, he walked down the staircase to his seat at the ringside.

KING OF PAIN
LINIMENT

I saw this dog jumping through the water from the pumper, and when it caught him full on, he reeled like a rubber ball. Back he came and the transformation from white to black as he was covered with mud, from up by the hose, and several black to white as he dashed back through the water, was about as funny as anything I'd seen. My enquiries then and later form the story about "Bing" is a ladies' man, attends all girls' softball games, and has been elected an honorary member of one of the clubs.

Flin Flon is not a company town, but has been mightily well-treated by the mining company after which it is named. Schools, skating and curling rinks, community hall, etc., and even to the residents—largely a contribution of the company, but there seems to be no air of contentment about it, but simply good neighborliness.

I like Flin Flon and the people I met and I like the spirit of the place. Too bad there's not room or employment for 7,000 more people.

Plane Crashes

Accidents Fail To Lessen United States Enthusiasm For Naval Craft

Loss of 11 lives and three $100,000 war planes in mock defence of the Hawaiian Islands failed to lessen United States naval officials' enthusiasm for aircraft.

Despite the tragedies and the fact that six other planes were forced down at sea without damage, a high navy official said the aircraft performed wonderful services in scouting thousands of miles of ocean in all directions.

Six of the victims were missing in a plane which dropped out of a steep formation during scouting duty.

Bodies of three other men were recovered from a barge, and one which crashed off Oahu Island in a rain squall. Two more bodies were believed in the submerged fuselage.

The crew of a third plane, forced down and sunk earlier, was rescued.

Plans are reported to be under way for a railway, 2,500 miles long, to provide a 67-hour service between Chungking, China, and Soviet Russia.

Canton Island

To Be Used As An Air Base For Pan-American Airways

A Washington dispatch says Interior Secretary Ickes has granted a license to Pan-American Airways to use Canton Island in the south Pacific ocean as an air base. The island's eight miles of lagoon will become a stop on commercial trans-Pacific air transport service between California and Australia.

Canton and nearby Enderbury islands, both coral atolls, recently were claimed by the United States and placed under supervision of the interior department by presidential decree. They lie approximately 1,800 miles southwest of Hawaii, and are on the air route between Hawaii and New Zealand.

Gas Bag For British Babies In The Event Of War

A rubber gas bag for babies is the Home Office's latest device to make Great Britain's 4,000,000 inhabitants gas tight in the event of war.

A spokesman said that babies two years old and under would be provided a rubber fabric bag capable of enclosing their bodies entirely.

The bag has a pump for injecting air through a filter. The pump must be used every 15 minutes.

The spokesman said Britain has 30,000,000 gas masks, which are being manufactured at the rate of 500,000 a week. They are to be delivered in quantities of 30,000 to municipalities throughout the country.

The masks, however, will not be delivered to the inhabitants unless war becomes imminent. Then, the Home Office has guaranteed, every Briton will get a gas mask within eight hours.

QUEEN MARY BATTERED ABOUT BY RAGING ATLANTIC STORM; MANY PASSENGERS HURT

Fittings, Dishes Broken and Giant Waves Crash Over Decks

(Lethbridge Herald)

PLYMOUTH Eng., April 11.—The liner Queen Mary arrived from New York four hours late today after battling a 24 hour storm which sent great waves crashing over her decks, injuring about 40 persons, most of them slightly. It was the worst storm the big liner has encountered.

Marc Connelly, American playwright, said the storm was "worse than a West Indies hurricane."

"I saw dozens of passengers picked up by stewards and escorted for medical attention," he said. "The waves must have been 100 feet high."

Lily Pons, French oper star, kept her promise and sang for the passengers during the 70 mile gale.

"I had little sleep the night before," she said, "because my bed crashed into the stateroom wall and stewards had to come to my rescue and clamp it down."

"Ropes were stretched across so the audience artists could hold on to them. While I was singing I let go of the rope and the next thing I knew I was sliding across the stage, but I kept singing."

Passengers Injured

The gale started Friday night and raged through Saturday night. Many passengers limped down the gangplank here with bandaged faces, arms or legs.

The liner suffered no damage except to furniture and fittings, which were smashed in every department. One alleyway became a river of wine when four hogsheds smashed through a storeroom door and burst.

Reserve supplies of chinaware and glass were brought out when dishes were swept from tables and hurled against the walls or floors. Stewards worked all night to unravel tangles of baggage and equipment and reassure nervous passengers.

CANST THOU BEAT IT!

Consider the editor. A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in the town. The physician getteth ten plunks. The editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tippeth the beam at nine pounds. Yes, he lieth even as a centurion. And the proud father giveth him a Cremona.

Behold the young one groweth up and graduateth. And the editor putteth into his paper a swell notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and of her exceeding comeliness. Like unto the Rose of Sharon is she and her gown is played up to beat the band. And the dressmaker getteth two score and four iron men. And the editor gets a sweet little note from the girl graduate.

And the daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party. It runneth a column solid. And the fair one remembereth him from afar with a picture postal card that costeth six for a shilling. Behold she returneth, and the youth of the town fall down and worship. She picketh one, and low—she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our promising young men and getteth away with it. And they sent unto the editor a bid to the wedding, and behold the bids are fashioned in a far city. Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth 10 bonuses. The groom sendeth the editor off for 18 months subscription.

All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered unto the soil. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head and the darn thing cometh out "Gone to her last Rousing Place."

And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps, and they pulleth out their ads and careleth their subs, and they swing the hammer even unto the third and fourth generation.

Canadian horses imported into the United Kingdom in 1937 numbered 287 head as compared with 279 in 1936. Of the 1937 exports, 40 were hunters, selected and bought in Canada. The others were work horses, some of which were taken over to the United Kingdom by Canadian dealers. One lot was chosen by a British buyer who came over to Canada and made his own selections. In all cases the selection of the horses was particularly good, mostly heavy horses around 16 to 17 hands, sound and well broken, and from four to five years of age.

Sales of Canadian cheese in 1937 by the Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society in Scotland were the largest in several years, and exceeded the sales of 1936 by almost 50 per cent.

CHICKEN STEAK

Put in a small pot 15 or 20 minutes until tender. Use no water or fat, as the onions contain sufficient moisture. Heat a frying pan smoking hot, and brown about two pounds of chicken steak quickly on both sides. Reduce heat and turn the meat frequently until it is cooked through. Season both steak and onions and serve the meat on a platter surrounded by the onions. Add butter if desired.

PLANKED STEAK EN CARRIROLE

Cover the flank steak with a paste made in proportion of 4 tablespoon mustard to 3 tablespoons vinegar. Place steak in baking dish and cover with thin slice onion. Add small quantity of hot water. Cover and bake in moderate oven for one and a half hours.

BEEF, ALGERIAN STYLE

Cut into thick cubes two pounds of beef from the round or shoulder. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge slightly with flour, and coat quickly in a little tricolour marrow or olive oil. Arrange cubes in layers in buttered casserole, with sliced fresh tomatoes, finely-chopped mild red peppers, and dot over each layer with butter. Heap until the beef is used. Pour in one cup chicken stock or two in stock, cover and cook in oven until meat is tender—ten to two to three hours.

Canadian Cows Favours it in United Kingdom

On account of their milk yield, their good health, and the way they thrive on British pasture, Canadian milk cows have increased in favour in Great Britain year by year since 1933 when the importations of Canadian dairy cows to the United Kingdom commenced. Since then the importations have been 633 in 1933; 5143 in 1934; 2531 in 1935; 654 in 1936, and 810 in 1937. Of the number exported in 1937, 754 were Friesians and 148 Ayrshires, the landings at Glasgow being 603 head and 207 head at Cardiff. The demand for these Canadian cows from British dairymen greatly exceeds the supply, especially during the autumn and winter months when the milk cows are short and prices high.

RESEARCH ENGINEERS
BEST IN OIL INDUSTRY

The public is so ingenious and unceasing efforts of research engineers and use of science is nowhere better illustrated than in the story of gasoline.

Today's automobile engine would be impossible if it had to run on even the best kind of gasoline produced in 1910. In that year the average yield of gasoline from a barrel of crude oil was 4½ gallons, now the yield is 19 gallons, more than four times as much.

In 1933, for instance, motorists of North America used between 18 and 19 billion gallons of gasoline and the industry processed less than 40 million barrels of crude oil to get it. The best-refining methods of 27 years ago could have produced from that crude oil not much more than a billion gallons—and that was all the gasoline there was in it.

To have furnished the additional 14 billion gallons of gasoline needed in 1933, the refining methods of 1910 would have required nearly 3 billion barrels of crude. To have supplied by such methods the quality of gasoline needed by the modern car would have been impossible. Art. B.8.

Powder Snow In The Rockies

Nothing in Europe, according to the most enthusiastic visitors, can compare with the Canadian Rockies for skiing. Record crowds of visiting winter sportsmen this season have found superlative snow conditions in the Banff and Lake Louise districts of the great mountain ranges in Western Canada. Owing to the altitude of this mile-high playground, the skiing will remain good until early summer.

The Canadian Rockies are experiencing a great increase in popularity. Special trains have brought large crowds of skiers regularly from Western Canada and United States to enjoy the fine powder snow surface on the long, sweeping slopes of Mount Norquay and Sunshine Lodge, and many parties have penetrated to the unexplored Skoki Valley and Mount Assiniboine districts. Other large parties have come from Toronto, Boston, New York and distant eastern centres. Among their numbers have been celebrated skiers acquainted with the most famous ski-grounds of the world, all of whom have been impressed by the scenic grandeur, sense of exploration, and the perfect snow conditions. The pictures above include two scenes from Mount Assiniboine and Skoki Valley and action shots of expert skiers enjoying the deep powder snow.

His own crum of comfort was the thought that to be killed in action in the hunting field was a fate becoming a Bingley. He had seen in the village churchyard the tombstones of a number of the tribe who had died with their riding boots on. Would he lie beside them, he wondered, or in the grave in the lower garden Gramp had dug for Elaine? These massive speculations occupied his mind until he was awed, looming large ahead of him, Lester's Wall. To Ernest it looked as high as the Great Wall of China.

He did the only thing he could do, which was to shut his eyes, hold his breath, and pray. He felt the rush of air as he rocketed through the atmosphere like a space-ship bound for Mars. There was a thump and thud, and he opened his eyes. He was not surrounded, as he had expected to be, by cherubim and seraphim, or even by doctors and nurses. He did not smell a celestial aroma, or the ether-carbolic perfume of a hospital, but only the clean, invigorating, morning air, and he discovered that he was still aboard Fin McCool, and that Lester's Wall was behind him.

His success in surmounting the wall went straight to Fin McCool's head. Drunk with power, he decided to abandon the pursuit of the fox and devote his life to jumping all the walls in next part on a flyer.

Off he went, at a tangent, and Ernest went with him, part of him and yet not exactly part of him, like a loose nut on a flyer.

The hunt went north and Fin went south. No chat of his course exists. Ernest never knew where he went. All he knew was that the walls came too quick to count. Fin would rush at them, career over them, and then, seeking new walls to conquer; or, if he liked a particular wall, he would wheel around and jump at it again; but at no time did he slacken his pace enough to permit Ernest to slip to the ground, and, by the time he had negotiated his seventh, or perhaps seventeenth wall, Ernest was too numb for voluntary motion.

It is certain that Fin circled back and once more jumped Lester's Wall for the Earl of Bingley, smoking a pipe on the spot near the wall where Ernest never knew where he went. He is an astonished eye-witness. Country-folk rubbed their eyes at the sight of a big horse, possibly speckled, jumping back and forth over their walls. The ride of Ernest Bingley passed into Somerset folklore and took its place in legend beside the ride of John Digby, Paul Revere and Sheridan.

Fin McCool, having proved to the world and himself, that Lester's Wall was a mere hummock to a leaper of his talent, soared on at a dizzy pace in search of bigger and better walls. He scented some where beyond Lester's Wall an obstacle worthy of him, and he raced through Kingley's Copse with his thrutle wild Cope.

It was a thick copse, bordered with underbrush and studded with trees and not at all an ideal riding-plot, but Fin McCool ploughed through it like a love-sick moon on late for a tryst.

In the exact centre of Kingley's Copse, Ernest severed his association with Fin McCool. Their parting was sudden and final, and long hanging

A Strange Friendship

Story Of A Gorilla That Died Of A Broken Heart

"I suppose I am one of the few people who have experienced the friendship of a gorilla," said Nancy Hartman.

"His name was John Daniel, and he belonged to a Mr. Cunningham. Some people will no doubt remember seeing him in the window of a London shop—a hat shop in Sloane street. He was captured in the French Congo, and eventually appeared for sale in a London store. Miss Cunningham who was, and still is, the most courageous and enterprising of women, decided to buy him and see if she could rear him. He was judged then to be between two and three years old.

"Against everyone's advice, Miss Cunningham decided to bring him up as near as possible as she would a child, and this she did. Whenever I called he used to meet me at the door, and he used to be between two and three years old.

B.C. Defences

Report Says Armaments Being Taken From Halifax To Western Coast

"Halifax is being stripped rapidly of the semblance of defence against possible wartime attackers, the Halifax Chronicle said in a newspaper story. "Within recent weeks almost the entire armament of the city and port has been dismantled and shipped to the Pacific coast.

"Aside from Chebucto Head, where a lonely pair of 4.2 guns stand on guard for Halifax, only battery in and about Halifax is without a gun. Even the Citadel has lost its armament, except for the non salient canon.

"From Fort Levis, from Fort Ogilvie, from the Amorettes, from McNally Island, from the dockyard—where a gun was to be found that could and onto the great 'plates', erstwhile masts and masts. There are 1,000 glass port holes in half and 600 square cells of cardboard in the super structure.

"Over 9,000 separate pieces of cardboard went into the job altogether and 100 of these were used to build the warehouse which is fitted with paneled doors. Funnels, lifeboat davits, deck and deckhouse are of cedar and both wood and cardboard form the deck fittings. At night Mr. Egleham illuminates his model with interior lights.

"In future four destroyers will be based at Esquimaux on Vancouver Island, six at Port Hudson. It is understood that naval families now stationed in Halifax will leave in a few weeks for the west coast, where they will reside hereafter.

"Three years at least will elapse before it will be possible to commence restoration of Halifax defences and four or five years before authorities will be in a position to increase fortifications beyond the strength hitherto maintained."

"The Bedford magazine and all other depots containing shells and ammunition of any kind have been removed. No informed sources state that nothing in Halifax has been spared that might serve to defend British Columbia from possible invader."

"Perfect Imported Egg
Consumer in England Thinks Canada Has Produced It"

Canada claims to have produced, after years of research and experiment, what is from the point of view of the consumer in England the perfect imported egg, says the Irish Independent. The first consignments of these eggs have just arrived in London—750 dozen—and they will be distributed to experts in various parts of the country from whom opinions will be gathered. The housing and feeding of the poultry have been minutely watched, the eggs have been graded and tested, they have been sent over in special chambers kept at a fixed temperature and watched by vigilant C.P.B. officials and they are being handled on this side with all the care usually bestowed on the most precious cargoes.

Of the 26,000,000 cows kept in the United States for milking purposes at least half are of the grade that's worth more than the milk they produce.

SOMETHING TO CHERISH

The Festival finals announced in our last issue shows that the local and district teachers are to be commended on the splendid progress made by their pupils.

The teachers have many handicaps in their training careers, and find co-operation almost nil at times which naturally does not have the results obtained in harmony essential to produce best results. So, taking into consideration the obstacles any teaching unit must surmount to achieve results is an item that must not be overlooked in your picture of what the district teachers have recently accomplished.

CORN

VARIETIES

Experimental stations and other institutions are frequently asked to recommend a variety of corn for certain districts. In order to be able to give intelligent recommendations it is necessary to know not only something of the weather conditions prevailing in the district, but also something of the way the crop is going to be handled. Corn varieties vary very widely in their habit of growth and some varieties suit certain conditions much better than others do. Where corn is to be grown for ensilage purposes and cut with a corn binder it is advisable to choose a fairly tall, growing variety, and one which reaches a fair degree of maturity. Early strains of Northwestern Dent and Minnesota No. 13 are suitable varieties for this purpose.

Where the corn is expected to ripen, or to approach that stage as early as possible, and where it is intended to utilize the crop by turning live stock into the field to do their own harvesting, earlier varieties such as Gehu, Improved Squaw, or White Flint can be used to best advantage. In districts where the season is very short and cool, a very yellow flint variety, such as Manalta, would give much better results than the three early flint varieties mentioned above. The shortness of the stalks and their heavy sucker growth is no detriment to any of these varieties when used in this way.

THE STRONG RIGHT ARM OF CANADA

RECEIVING deposits or making loans, Canada's banks are dealing largely with other people's money. Parliament has placed the strictest safeguards around the handling of other people's money.

When you deposit, or when you borrow, the strong right arm of the nation itself is thrown about you, for banking is subjected through The Bank Act, to greater Government regulation, stricter supervision and more penetrating Parliamentary scrutiny than any other business in Canada.

Banks assemble the surplus funds of millions of Canadians, mostly in small sums. Based on these deposits, and their own resources, they make credit available where needed, for agriculture, commerce, industry, lumbering, mining, fishing, transportation, markets, governments, municipalities and individuals.

These are grave responsibilities. In discharging them the banks are well supervised.

Charters of all Canadian banks expire at the end of every ten years; they can be renewed for no more than ten years, and then only after the most searching parliamentary investigation of the whole business of banking. Can you name any other form of enterprise in Canada in which every company's charter expires at one time? Or which has to undergo parliamentary investigation as a condition to continuing in business?

Parliament can, of course, amend The Bank Act at any time, but every ten years that Act is thrown open for what is known as the "Decennial Revision." Bank officers are called before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons. They are examined and cross-examined by members of every phase of banking is fully disclosed.

It is a large committee which includes many of the ablest minds in Parliament. Every province and every political party is represented on it, so that Canadians do not lack in any sense for the most penetrating examination of the business of banking.

Canadians as a people thus regulate the business of banking through their elected representatives. Into The Bank Act, by reason of the work of this Committee over the years, have been built all of the safeguards prompted by experience.

In addition, Canada's chartered banks are supervised in various other ways and operate under almost continuous scrutiny. Shareholders appoint their own auditors—chartered accountants—who closely examine each bank's affairs.

Then there is an Inspector General of Banks, an officer under the Minister of Finance, whose duty it is to keep through out the year a vigilant eye upon banking operations. He has access to all bank records.

Banks have to make statutory returns to the Minister of Finance and to the Bank of Canada, periodically. Heavy penalties are provided for neglect to make them or if they contain falsity or deceit.

Each month they must report to the Government the total of loans made to bank directors or to firms in which they are partners, and of loans which directors guarantee. The return of January 31st, 1938, shows that the total of such loans does not amount to more than 1/60th part of the total bank loans.

There is no "money monopoly" in banking. Any group of responsible people who can raise $500,000 capital subscribed and half of it paid up, and safe-keep the requirements of The Bank Act, can start a bank. The requirements are devised to safeguard the people against fly-by-night promoters.

Up till 1934 chartered banks issued their own notes to the amount of their paid-up capital and might, on occasion, exceed that sum under definite and rigid legal limits.

In establishing the Bank of Canada, Parliament provided that for ten years from and including 1936, there should be a steady year by year reduction in the note circulation of the chartered banks.

We can issue our own notes now only up to 85 cent. of our paid-up capital. Each year, as this reduction takes place, the note issue of the Bank of Canada increases.

Thus it must be seen that banks have never had an unlimited power to issue notes—they have always been definitely restricted by Parliament, with heavy fines as penalties for any breach of these restrictions.

There is no mystery about the work of Canada's chartered banks—their doing as an open book to the Dominion Government, through the Minister of Finance, its officers, and the Bank of Canada.

The chartered banks are controlled by specific laws, regulations and restrictions designed for your protection as depositors, note-holder or borrower. Their work is to safeguard the thrifty, promote the flow of trade and commerce and to facilitate the transfer of goods and services.
